

Contents

List of illustrations	page x
List of maps	xiii
List of contributors	xiv
Biographical notice on Jane Rowlandson	xvii
Preface	xix
List of abbreviations	xxii
Note to the reader	xxiv
Aids for the reader	xxv
Glossary of technical terms	xxxii
I Introduction	I
Jane Rowlandson and Roger S. Bagnall
1.1. What do we mean by slavery?	I
1.2. Slavery and other forms of dependence	5
1.3. Calling a slave a slave – or not: vocabularies of slavery and dependence	8
1.4. Sources of slaves	10
1.5. Were slaves deracinated ‘non-persons’?	14
1.5.1. Deracination	14
1.5.1.1. Slaves and families	16
1.5.2. Access to various forms of social or religious association	17
1.5.3. Were slaves necessarily deprived of honour?	19
1.5.4. Further aspects of the dishonouring of slaves	21
1.5.4.1. Reputation	21
1.5.4.2. The dehumanising effects of being put on sale	21
1.5.4.3. Loss of sexual autonomy	22
1.5.5. Naming slaves	24
1.6. Ways of accessing the ancient slave’s experience	25
1.6.1. Divining the ancient slave’s experience	25
1.6.2. Archaeological evidence for Egyptian slavery	26
1.6.3. Tracing the choreography of slaves’ daily life	27
1.6.4. Where did Egyptian slaves live?	27

W. Graham Claytor , Jennifer Cromwell , Christopher J. Eyre , Brian P. Muhs , Sarah J. Pea

Table of Contents

More Information

VI

Contents

1.6.5. Were slaves easily recognisable by their clothing, etc.?	28
1.6.6. Ethnicity and skin colour	28
1.6.7. The slave's experience of death	29
1.7. The work of slaves: what did they do?	31
1.8. Punishment and resistance	34
2 Pharaonic Egypt	37
Christopher J. Eyre
2.1. Introduction	37
2.2. The vocabulary of dependence (1–17)	39
2.2.1. bak and hem people (1–3)	40
2.2.2. hem-nesu people: 'king's-slaves' (4–6)	43
2.2.3. djet - and nedjet -people (7–11)	46
2.2.4. meret -people (12–14)	52
2.2.5. nedjes 'little'-people and nemehu 'orphan'-people (15–17)	56
2.3. The social contexts of dependence: criteria for distinguishing slavery from clientage (18–32)	59
2.3.1. The acquisition of people (18–23)	62
2.3.2. Slave raiding and the creation of slave communities (24–29)	65
2.3.3. Individual acquisition of people through warfare (30–32)	73
2.3.4. The renaming of slaves	77
2.4. Slaves' economic roles (33–39)	78
2.4.1. The assignment of slaves to agricultural and other work (33–38)	78
2.4.2. Economically active slaves (39)	85
2.5. The trade in people (40–43)	87
2.5.1. Foreign slave trade (40)	87
2.5.2. The purchase of individual slaves (41–42)	89
2.6. Inheritance and gift (44–47)	95
2.7. The integration of slaves as individuals in private households (48–52)	99
2.8. The joint ownership of slaves (53–60)	107
2.9. Enslavement as punishment or for debt (61)	115
2.10. Overall evaluation	117
3 The Late Period	119
3.1. Introduction	119
Brian P. Muhs
3.2. The Egyptian sources (Abnormal Hieratic and Demotic)	119
Brian P. Muhs

W. Graham Claytor , Jennifer Cromwell , Christopher J. Eyre , Brian P. Muhs , Sarah J. Pea

Table of Contents

More Information
Contents

vii

3.2.1.	Introduction	119
3.2.2.	Vocabulary of slavery and dependence	120
3.2.3.	Texts (62–77)	123
3.3.	Slavery in Aramaic documents from Egypt	144
	Christopher J. Tuplin
3.3.1.	Corpus and terminology	144
3.3.2.	Becoming a slave	145
3.3.3.	Acquiring slaves	146
3.3.4.	Onomastics	147
3.3.5.	Sources of slaves	148
3.3.6.	Owners and ownership	149
3.3.7.	Emancipation	151
3.3.8.	Slaves, payment, and property	155
3.3.9.	The experience of slavery	156
3.3.10.	Texts (78–90)	159
4	Jewish perspectives on slavery in Egypt	176
	Sarah J. Pearce
4.1.	Introduction: sources and chronology	176
4.2.	The Hebrew Torah (91–104)	179
	4.2.1. Introduction	179
	4.2.2. The vocabulary of servitude in the Hebrew Torah	181
4.3.	The Greek Torah (Septuagint (LXX)) (105–117)	190
	4.3.1. Terminology	191
4.4.	Ancient Jewish writings related to Scripture (118–130)	198
5	Ptolemaic Egypt	211
	Dorothy J. Thompson
5.1.	Introduction	211
5.2.	Ptolemaic royal regulation of slavery (131–140)	213
5.3.	Becoming, being, and ceasing to be a slave (141–165)	225
5.4.	Forms of dependency other than chattel slavery (166–172)	258
5.5.	The Egyptian sources (173–174)	268
	Brian P. Muhs
6	Roman Egypt	274
	W. Graham Claytor
6.1.	Introduction	274
	6.1.1. Terminology	277
	6.1.2. Rome, Alexandria, and the province of Egypt (175–185)	278
6.2.	Enslavement (186–191)	288

W. Graham Claytor , Jennifer Cromwell , Christopher J. Eyre , Brian P. Muhs , Sarah J. Pea

Table of Contents

More Information

viii

Contents

6.3. Being sold and transferred (192–200)	294
6.4. Enslaved workers (201–207)	305
6.5. Escaping slavery (208–213)	311
6.6. Becoming free (214–221)	315
6.7. Dying in slavery (222–225)	325
6.8. Violence and exploitation (226–231)	329
6.9. Census and taxes (232–236)	335
6.10. Indentured servitude (237–239)	338
7 Byzantine and Umayyad Egypt	343
7.1. Introduction	343
Jane Rowlandson and Roger S. Bagnall
7.2. Greek documentary sources	347
Jane Rowlandson and Roger S. Bagnall
7.2.1. Slaves, dependents, and coloni on great estates (240–243)	347
7.2.2. Slaves and servants in Egyptian cities (244–251)	354
7.2.3. Slavery in the Dioskoros archive (252–255)	365
7.2.4. On the borders of freedom and slavery: paramone (256–258)	369
7.3. The Coptic evidence	375
Jennifer Cromwell
7.3.1. Introduction	375
7.3.2. Terminological issues: a slave by any other name?	376
7.3.2.1. Translating Greek terms	377
7.3.2.2. Terminology	380
7.3.3. The literary evidence	382
7.3.3.1. Shenoute on slaves (259–260)	382
7.3.3.2. Slaves and slavery in Gnostic texts (261–262)	384
7.3.3.3. Hagiographies and encomia (263–264)	386
7.3.4. The non-literary evidence	389
7.3.4.1. Female slaves in Nubian communities (265–266)	389
7.3.4.2. Personal and household servants (267–271)	392
7.3.4.3. Monastic slaves: donations of children and adults (272–273)	396
7.3.4.4. Conscription: building works and navy (274–277)	401
7.4. Arabic documents for slavery in early Islamic Egypt	406
Jelle Bruning
7.4.1. Introduction	406
7.4.2. Enslavement and the slave trade (278–280)	407

Cambridge University Press & Assessment
978-1-107-03297-2 — Slavery and Dependence in Ancient Egypt
Edited by Jane L. Rowlandson , Roger S. Bagnall , Dorothy J. Thompson , With contributions by Jelle Bruning ,

W. Graham Claytor , Jennifer Cromwell , Christopher J. Eyre , Brian P. Muhs , Sarah J. Pea

Table of Contents

More Information

Contents

ix

7.4.3. Social integration (281–283) 414

7.4.4. Slave labour (284–287) 420

7.4.5. Emancipation and thereafter (288–290) 425

7.4.6. Epilogue: Arabic documents from the third/ninth and fourth/tenth century 429

Concordance of texts 432

Bibliography 436

Index 476