NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Bushnell Amy Turner holds a Ph.D. in Colonial Latin American History from the University of Florida, with fields in Early Modern Europe and Historical Geography. Author of The King's Coffers: Proprietors of the Spanish Florida Treasury, 1565–1702, and Situado and Sabana: Spain's Support System for the Presidio and Mission Provinces of Florida, she is at work on two book manuscripts: "The Indomitable Nations: Patterns of Security, Autonomy, and Domain in the Indian Americas" and "Quaker Odyssey: Jonathan Dickinson's Shipwreck and Misadventures in Florida, 1696–1697." She is affiliated in retirement to the Brown University History Department and the John Carter Brown Library.

Caso Bello Álvaro received a Ph.D. in History from Johns Hopkins University with a dissertation entitled "The Agentes de Indias: Transatlantic Lobbying, and the Representation of Spanish-American Interests in Madrid, c. 1776–1820." He was a Postdoctoral Scholar in Latin American History at the University of Colorado-Boulder's History Department. He is currently a Visiting Scholar at Johns Hopkins' Program for Latin American Studies, and a Level 1 Associate Researcher with Uruguay's National Research Agency (Agencia Nacional de Investigación e Innovación).

da Cruz Miguel Dantas is an Assistant Researcher at Instituto de Ciências Sociais of Universidade de Lisboa, where he has taught since 2017. He was a research fellow at John Carter Brown Library (Brown University) and at Universidade Federal Fluminense. He has published extensively on the history of the Portuguese Atlantic World, exploring the social dimensions of warfare and the formation of Portuguese imperial imaginaries. He is currently studying the petitionary drives of the nineteenth-century Liberal Revolutions. He participates in several international projects, such the RESISTANCE: Rebellion and Resistance in the Iberian Empires. He organizes and coordinates several permanent seminars.

Dixon Bradley is an Assistant Professor of early American and Native American history at the University of Memphis. His book manuscript, Republic of Indians: Empires of Indigenous Law in the Early American South, explores how seventeenth-century Indigenous peoples from Florida to the Chesapeake embraced the status of imperial subjects and vasallos (vassals), and pushed for incorporation with Europeans in hybrid polities in which they had a say and were instrumental in creating.

Greene Jack P. is Andrew W. Mellon Professor in the Humanities, Emeritus, at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., USA. He has written many books and papers on the history of colonial British America, the American Revolution, and the early modern British Empire, including, most recently, The Constitutional Origins of the American Revolution (2010), Evaluating Empire and Confronting Colonialism in Eighteenth-Century Britain (2013), Creating the British Atlantic: Essays in Transplantation, Adaptation, and Continuity (2013), and Settler Jamaica in the 1750s: A Social Portrait (2016). His latest book is an edition of James Knight, The Natural, Moral, and Political History of Jamaica [1746] (2021).

Hrdlicka James F. is a Lecturer in the School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies at Arizona State University. Previously he was a Postdoctoral Scholar with the Andrea Mitchell Center for the Study of Democracy at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of Colonists, Citizens, Constitutions: Creating the American Republic (Scala Arts, 2020), a companion volume to exhibitions hosted by the New-York Historical Society and the Museum of the American Revolution. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Virginia.

Kopytoff Larissa earned her Ph.D. in African History at New York University. She teaches in the Department of History at the University of South Florida. Her research explores citizenship and nationality in Africa, colonial law and administration, and mobility within and across imperial boundaries, with an emphasis on the French empire.

Masters Adrian is a Postdoctoral Researcher at the University of Tübingen. He is currently completing his co-authored monograph The Radical Spanish Empire with Jorge Cañizares-Esguerra (Harvard University Press, 2020) and pursuing multiple lines of research, including the system of petitioning in the Habsburg Spanish Indies, as well as race-making and knowledge-production in Peru, Mexico, and the Philippines.

O'Connor Adrian is an Associate Professor of History at the University of South Florida. He is the author of In Pursuit of Politics: Education and Revolution in Eighteenth-Century France (2017), as well as numerous articles on the Enlightenment and the French Revolution. He is also editor of the peer-reviewed journal, The Historian.

Palacios Cerezales Diego Ramon y Cajal Researcher, Universidad Complutense de Madrid. I have published widely on the history of popular politics, policing, and social movements in continental Europe in the modern era. His most recent work includes: "France Speaks! Petitioning for Louis-Napoleon in 1851." French Historical Studies 43, no. 3 (2020): 421–450; "Petitioning for Empire in Napoleonic Europe." Journal of Modern European History 18, no. 1 (2020): 96–114; "Re-Imagining Petitioning in Spain (1808–1823)." Social Science History 43, no. 3 (2019): 487–508.

Slemian Andréa is an Associate Professor, History Department, Universidade Federal de São Paulo (UNIFESP, Brazil), where she has taught Colonial History since 2011. Her research interests are in the judicial culture of Latin America between the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, with a comparative emphasis on courts and legal proceedings. She has also written about the process of independence and state-building in America, particularly in Brazil.

van den Tol Joris obtained his Ph.D. on lobbying in relation to Dutch Brazil (1630–1654) at Leiden University in 2018. The book based on his dissertation research, Lobbying in Company, was published with Brill in 2020. From 2019 to 2021, he was a Postdoc at Harvard University's history department on an NWO Rubicon fellowship. Together with two colleagues he also wrote a book on the economic and political ties between the Dutch Central Bank and slavery in the nineteenth century that was published by Leiden University Press in 2022. From October 2021, he is a Postdoctoral Research Associate at Queens' College in Cambridge, and from January 2022 a Marie Curie Fellow at Cambridge University. He has published on petitions in relation to the Dutch colonies in Brazil, New Netherland, and Taiwan and on smuggling.
