ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Support for this project came from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the R.F. Johnson Faculty Development Fund, and Office of the Dean of the Faculty at Connecticut College. The staff of the Connecticut College Library has been instrumental in locating, providing, and acquiring relevant and hard-to-find materials for my research.

Every book benefits from the comments, criticisms, and suggestions of colleagues. I would like to particularly thank Ángel Berenguer, Tom Deveny, Kathryn Everly, Simon Hay, Francisco LaRubia Prado, Lynn Purkey, and Alejandro Yarza. I am indebted to all of them for their comments and suggestions at the different writing stages of the manuscript and for their friendship and encouragement. My colleagues at Connecticut College also provided important support. Bridget Baird, Chris Colbath, Marc Forster, Benjamin Panciera, and Bridget Pupillo read some of the chapters and gave me very helpful feedback. I also got necessary support for this project from my colleagues Jeff Cole, Leo Garofalo, Anthony Graesch, Monika López Anuarbe, Karolin Machtands, and Larry Vogel. My gratitude goes also to Hispanic Studies Department administrative assistants Nancy Lewandowski and Rosa Woodhams. I have shared some of the ideas of this book with my students at Connecticut College. Their comments have made it better and more accessible. I appreciate their contributions.

Special thanks to Jessica Koehler, a colleague and friend from the Department of Hispanic Studies who ensured a polished rendition of my ideas in academic English. Apart from this important task, her constant support has been key to the success of this study. I am also grateful to Andrew López who compiled the Index for this book.

Additionally, thanks to the series Hispanic Issues On Line (HIOL), and specially Luis Martín Estudillo for granting permission to include a revised version of my article “El trágico camino a la modernidad: La hija de Juan Simón” in Chap. 1.

Not only colleagues in the academic field deserve mention and my deepest gratitude. The scholar needs other outlets to be successful and sane during the writing process. It is impossible to recognize all those who have shared my passion for cycling and given me inspiration. One person who stands out is Monika Dreslin, who has consistently given me support the last few years.

I would like to thank the editorial team at Palgrave Macmillan for their careful handling of the project and their constant guidance and encouragement. I am also grateful to the reviewers for their suggestions and their constructive criticism.

These acknowledgments would not be complete without thanking my parents, sisters, brothers-in-law, and nieces, as well as many friends, who have offered me unconditional support. Elizabeth, my wife, deserves special mention. A partner in everything, her faith in me and in this project gave me the inspiration to successfully finish this project. She tirelessly edited different versions of the study and helped me to refine my ideas. Finally, our son Rodrigo, who was on playdates when I started this project and now is in college, has watched most of the films analyzed in this study with me. I dedicate this book to both of them with love and gratitude.
