Palgrave Studies in Literature, Science and Medicine is an exciting series that focuses on one of the most vibrant and interdisciplinary areas in literary studies: the intersection of literature, science and medicine. Comprised of academic monographs, essay collections, and Palgrave Pivot books, the series will emphasize a historical approach to its subjects, in conjunction with a range of other theoretical approaches. The series will cover all aspects of this rich and varied field and is open to new and emerging topics as well as established ones.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This monograph, which was partially based on my PhD thesis, is indebted to the tireless patience, advice, and encouragement of my supervisors, Professor Alice Jenkins and Dr Matthew Creasy. The kind permission of the Hunterian and the University of Glasgow's Special Collections facilitated my research on the silver fork novels, without which Chap. 2 would not have been possible.

I am grateful to Dr Laura Eastlake, Dr Douglas Small, Dr Hannah Tweed, Dr Sarah Gillies, Dr Marcello Giovanelli, Dr Chloe Harrison, Dr David Shuker, and Prof. Henry Snow, who all provided notes and resources for various chapters or proposals. I would like to express a particularly large amount of gratitude to Dr Daniel Jenkin-Smith, whose discussions, debates, shared reading material, and comments on drafts over the past six years have greatly shaped and improved this work (especially Chap. 4).

Finally, I would like to thank my family for their constant support and encouragement.

An earlier and shorter version of Chap. 3 of this work was published in Nineteenth-Century Gender Studies, 9:2 (Summer 2013); my thanks to the editors for permission to include an updated version of it here.
