

Contents

Introduction	15
CHAPTER 1
“Shall I at least set my lands in order?”: Post-war Mythopoeia in T. S. Eliot’s The Waste Land	31
CHAPTER 2
“If I could git more into the center of things...”: The End of Life in John Dos Passos’s Manhattan Transfer	51
CHAPTER 3
“For a transitory enchanted moment”: The Disillusion of Romance in Francis Scott Fitzgerald’s The Great Gatsby	73
CHAPTER 4
“A Spectacle with unexplained horrors”: Disenchanted Ritual in Ernest Hemingway’s The Sun Also Rises	93
CHAPTER 5
“The cycle is too cruel”: The Ambivalence of Myth in John Steinbeck’s To a God Unknown	113
CHAPTER 6
“Godamercy, they have shot the Holy Grail!”: Mythical Wreckage in Djuna Barnes’s Nightwood	131
Conclusion	151
Works Cited	161