The research and compilation of the manuscript for this final publication were made possible through a generous grant from the Shelby White–Leon Levy Program for Archaeological Publications. We would like to thank the committee for providing us with the support to work on the dormant material from Tel Akko, especially Lawrence Stager, Philip King, and James Wiseman who have encouraged us at every step along the way of this project. We would especially like to thank the fund's benefactors, Shelby White and Leon Levy, for their vision and backing, which has made this program and project possible. The wider ramifications and importance of Shelby White's and Leon Levy's contributions to the field of eastern Mediterranean archaeology have been revealed as the fruits of their program have come to bear, and have had a tremendous impact on the publication of archaeological materials in the 21st century and on the field in general. Leon Levy passed away during the preparation of this volume, a tragic loss to archaeology of an unwavering patron. In a small way this volume is a tribute to Leon Levy's legacy of philanthropy and the continued support of Shelby White. Larry Stager also died quite suddenly before we had finished formatting the illustrations for this final report; we hope that its publication stands as a testament to the memory of his dedication to the field of southern Levantine archaeology and the Bronze and Iron Age archaeology of the region.

During the long years since excavation, the processing of materials and manuscript preparation was carried out at the Sir Maurice and Lady Irene Hatter Laboratory at the University of Haifa. Sir Maurice and the Hatter Foundation kindly supported the research carried out as part of students' training in the Department of Maritime Civilizations at the University of Haifa. Grants from the Israel Science Foundation were instrumental in the original processing of the data. The excavation was financed by kind help from the Dorot Foundation, Tribute to the Danes Foundation and the late Rabbi B. Melchior, Den danaske Israel-komite and the late editor of Politiken, H. Pundik, Knud Højgaards Fond and the University of Copenhagen Humanities Faculty. Thanks are due to the students in the Near Eastern and Classical Archaeology Department (now Carsten Niebuhr Institute).

This volume would not have come to fruition without the constant help and diligent work of Ragna Stidsing, both through her insights in the stratigraphy, illustrations and photos and their preparation for publication, compilation and analyses, and through taking on the role as an intermediary between the two authors and the publisher's format, not a simple set of tasks in the least. Christin Engstrom aided with the initial digitizing of the architectural drawings. Catherine Painter Foster initially formatted many of the illustrations for publication, making sense of many bits and pieces. We have enjoyed interacting with numerous archaeology students at the University of Haifa, who have helped in immeasurable ways with the organization and cataloguing of the dormant Tel Akko materials.

Brody would like to thank the Breitstein family for inviting him into their home for so many wonderful Shabbat and holiday meals while in Haifa, and his colleague, and friend, Ezra Marcus, for welcoming him back to Haifa and for his support and intellectual stimulation. He wishes to thank his wife, Christina Kahrl Brody, for her patience and gentle urges to move forward and wrap up this large and complex project through numerous moves and the birth and growth of our two sons, Noah James and Nathaniel Alan Brody. It's finally out of our house!

He would also like to acknowledge the unwavering support of his parents, Richard Alan Brody and Marjorie Jean Brody, throughout his career. Richard (Dick) passed away close to the completion of the volume; may his memory continue to be a blessing.

Brody would like to thank Michal Artzy for giving him access to the Area H materials. He hopes that this work serves as a small commemoration of her fieldwork, teaching, mentoring of students, research, publications, and career in Israeli and eastern Mediterranean archaeology. Her research in NAA testing and material science approaches to understanding the maritime exchange of ceramics and other goods was pioneering, as has been her work as one of the few female dig directors in Israel through her excavations at Tel Nami, Tell Abu Hawam, and now back at Tel Akko's Total Archaeology Project. Michal is truly a "woman of valor," an inspiration, and an unwavering mentor, colleague, and friend.

Artzy would like to thank the late Sir Maurice and Lady Hatter and the Hatter Foundation as well as the members of the Sir Maurice and Lady Irene Hatter Laboratory for Coastal and Underwater Archaeology, especially Ragna Stidsing and the Recanati Institute for Maritime Studies at the University of Haifa and its staff. Thanks are also due to former students and lecturers participating in the excavation in Area H. They hearken from the Near Eastern and Classics Departments at the University of Copenhagen, University of Haifa, Evergreen College and University of California, Berkeley. In charge of some of the squares were: Bo Dahl-Hermansen, Maria Jacobsen, Stephen Lumsden, Mette Qvistoff Lumsden, Ragna Stidsing, and Aage Westenholz. Special thanks to Yael, who as a toddler in Area H never fell from the balks into the squares.
