Preface

This volume grew out of research that Mara R. Wade conducted during a long-term fellowship at the Newberry Library, Chicago, and her identification in their collections of Michael Röttenbeck's "Inscriptiones picturae et emblemata quae in aula magna curiae Norimbergensis publice extant. ..." <sup>1</sup> The Newberry Library, with generous financing from the Kress Foundation, supported additional research by two graduate students from the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, Andrew Schwenk and Jessica Wells, working under Wade's supervision to conduct further research and to transcribe the Latin and German manuscript texts, and translate them into English. <sup>2</sup> The Kress Foundation, together with the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD), New York, and the Goethe Institute, Chicago, all contributed generously to an international conference held at the Newberry Library in September 2018, when the website "Emblemata Politica" was launched. <sup>3</sup> The Department of Prints and Drawings at the Art Institute Chicago generously hosted the scholars for an exploration of their pertinent holdings as a part of the conference. <sup>4</sup> The Newberry Library also fully digitized the volume, <sup>5</sup> and it was subsequently ingested into Emblematica Online, where it can be studied in the context of other copies of Georg Rem's and Peter Isselburg's Emblemata Politica (1617), including a copy fully indexed according to Iconclass notations <sup>6</sup> and other works of political emblems by other authors. <sup>7</sup>

The papers assembled here have their origins in the Newberry conference and the participants are gratefully thanked here both for their expertise and for their patience as this volume came together during and after the pandemic. After the Newberry conference and with generous support of an Alexander von Humboldt Senior Research Prize, Mara Wade was able to conduct additional research in the libraries and archives of the University of Erlangen and various libraries, archives, and museums in Nürnberg in the summer of 2019. During this sustained period of research, she was able to correct her misattribution of the “Inscriptiones ...” from Georg Rem, the author of the emblems, to Michael Röttenbeck, the compiler of the Newberry manuscript.<sup>8</sup> Dr. Silvia Glaser is owed particular thanks here for her kind assistance at the Germanisches Nationalmuseum, Nürnberg.

The Newberry hybrid book is actually Volume VI of Michael Röttenbeck’s so-called “Collectana,” six volumes of compilations documenting early modern society in the Free Imperial City of Nürnberg; it includes transcriptions of the texts and descriptions of the images from the storied Nürnberg town hall,<sup>9</sup> with a special emphasis on paintings, including Pirckheimer’s and Dürer’s Triumphal Chariot of the Emperor Maximilian and the political emblems in the famed Great Hall.

The editors wish to thank the Newberry Library, Chicago, in particular, Dr. Lia Markey, Director of the Center for Renaissance Studies, for their unflinching support of this research. Dr. Paul Gehl, Curator Emeritus, offered critical insights and feedback in early stages of this research.

Early modern Nürnberg was awash in emblems, and they informed most aspects of everyday life. The intent in publishing these essays is, of course, to draw attention both to Rem’s emblems and to Röttenbeck’s compilations, while simultaneously expanding the purview of emblem studies, breaking away from strict iconological approaches to engage innovative and productive collaborations across methodologies and disciplines. The essays presented here focus on the context of Röttenbeck’s “Inscriptiones. ...” They seek to present a comprehensive view of early modern Nürnberg’s visual culture as it pertains to civic virtues and as it relates to the politics of the Free Imperial City and its role in its imperial context. As an alternative to the global turn, these studies deeply explore Nürnberg as a place, as a significant location from which to study the intersection of art and power. The volume seeks to showcase Nürnberg and its emblems and allegories as practices of place-making and “making publics.”<sup>10</sup> The goal is to demonstrate how emblem studies can provide a new lens to analyze early modern culture from a variety of perspectives and media. Not just a boutique discipline offering a safe silo for niche scholars, emblematics intersects with current interests in emerging, and established research.

9 Röttenbeck was an inveterate compiler and much of Volume VI, the “Inscriptiones ...,” is copied from other sources.

Emblems offer flexible systems of meaning, poetics, and pictorial language which can be analyzed from a multitude of perspectives: communications theory, architecture, archival studies and book history, the study of compilations and collections, networks, visual propaganda and empire studies, translation studies, intermediality, and the study of public art and monuments. The volume bundles perspectives from successful studies of Renaissance allegory and emblemata<sup>11</sup> and on cultural studies of Nürnberg as an urban and artistic center.<sup>12</sup> The volume maintains the humanistic perspective that art and poetry not only reflect and extol civic institutions, they help to create them. These essays advance the argument on the necessity of art and poetry, not just to embellish public life, but to create the shared values of the community.

The essays are grouped so as to lead readers into the topic, the city, and the Town Hall. The opening piece, "Nürnberg in the Seventeenth Century: Seeing an Early Modern City through Emblems," by Christopher Fletcher introduces the volume and opens the perspective on its emblematic culture. In "Inscriptiones picturæ et emblemata ...': How Nürnberg's Town Hall Emblems Came to the Newberry Library, Chicago" Mara R. Wade traces the journey of Rötenbeck's hybrid manuscript from Nürnberg to Chicago, describes and analyzes its contents, introduces the manuscript's compiler Rötenbeck, and then returns the focus to Nürnberg with the manuscript's own context within Rötenbeck's "Collectana," Volumes I–V of which are now held in the Germanisches Nationalmuseum. She also presents the emblematic ecosystem in contemporary Nürnberg and the author of the town hall emblems Georg Rem.

Jeffrey Chipps Smith's "The Exterior of Nürnberg Rathaus and the Art of Good Government" analyzes the exterior of Nürnberg's famed Town Hall, exploring these decorations and literally opening the door to Rötenbeck's contemporary tour through the painted decorations of the Town Hall's interior. His analysis of the exterior space of public art provides a lens for viewing and analyzing the allegories of the interior spaces and decorative arts. Smith sets the stage for the emblematic strategies of analogy and amplification that are evidenced throughout the essays in the volume. Moving the focus into the interior of the fabled Rathaus, in “Images as Language: Dürer, the Triumphal Arch and the Emblem in Nuremberg” Thomas Schauerte discusses Dürer’s Triumphal Chariot for the Emperor Maximilian I, which was painted onto an entire wall of the Great Hall. He focuses his analysis on proto-emblematic strategies of texts and images by Dürer, Celtis, and Pirckheimer. His discussion of their exploration of “thinking and speaking” pictorially foregrounds his central focus on the Misterium at the top of Dürer’s triumphal arch. Schauerte situates Dürer’s “secret picture” within the context of Nürnberg humanistic circles and their engagement with hieroglyphics: with Dürer’s central engraving for Celtis’s Philosophia and Dürer’s travels to Venice and the likely acquisition there for Pirckheimer of Horapollo’s Hieroglyphica and for himself of the Hypnerotomachia Poliphili. This essay provides the segue to Tamar Cholcman’s “The Migration of Emblems through Nürnberg’s History: From Triumph to Civic Memory,” which presents an overview of the ephemeral triumphal arches erected in Nürnberg for imperial visits in 1541, 1570, and 1612, tracing avian motives in the arches’ statues and their manifestations in various contemporary media.

The following essays articulate aspects of the material and literary culture surrounding Nürnberg’s emblematic production: Silvia Glaser treats the decorative arts, in this case focusing in particular on a set of engraved cups emblazoned with emblems from the period which are preserved in the Germanisches Nationalmuseum. Her study, “Some Examples of Emblems in Applied Arts from the Free Imperial City of Nürnberg,” confirms that Nürnberg burghers lived in an environment saturated with emblems. Victoria Gutsche in her “Rem’s Emblematica Politica in Context: Political Emblem Books in the First Half of the Seventeenth Century” and Werner Schnabel in his “Old and New Town Hall Emblems: Johann Conrad Rhumelius and the Emblemata Curialia Auctiora of 1629” analyze related emblem books that deepen the context of Rötenbeck’s compilation, Rem and Isselburg’s Emblematica Politica, and the Nürnberg Town Hall emblems. Gutsche focuses on the legacy of political emblem books in German-speaking lands later in the seventeenth century, while Schnabel presents emblems by Rötenbeck’s colleague at the Altdorf Academy, Johann Conrad Rhumelius. The Altdorf philosopher first wrote new texts to Rem’s emblems and then expanded and elaborated on them in a fascinating example of emblematic repurposing. To provide even more context, Jessica R. Wells transcribed the Latin, and translated into English, the biographical chapter on Georg Rem from Siegmund Jacob Apin’s history of the prochancellors of the Altdorf Academy, Vitae et Effigies Procancellariorvm Academiae Altorfinae from the early eighteenth century.<sup>13</sup> A respected Latin poet and jurist, Rem deservedly earned the recognition of his contemporaries. Stephanie Leitch's "Mapping the Hand and Scanning the Forehead: Embedding Knowledge in Astrological Images" expands the spheres of knowledge production with the study of images read as texts. The final paper represents the new life of the Nürnberg Town Hall emblems as part of the digital library and database Emblematica Online.<sup>14</sup> Timothy Cole's paper, "Adding the Röttenbeck Manuscript to Emblematica Online, A Virtual Corpus for Research and Teaching," presents the digital work and integration of Röttenbeck's manuscript into this international emblem resource and its affordances for pedagogy and further research. The storied Nürnberg emblems now occupy a new position—in the digital ecosystem of emblems and allegories, their study and significance for early modern and postmodern inquiry.

Conventions:

For convenience's sake, the editors have chosen to use Nürnberg, instead of Nuremberg, throughout this volume. We also use the German word "Rathaus" for the Nürnberg Town Hall, since phrases could get quite macaronic when describing, for example, "the Nürnberg Town Hall emblems in the Great Hall of the Nürnberg Town Hall." Those interested in reading this work will fully understand the German nomenclature Nürnberg and Rathaus. In keeping with English usage Nürnberg is referred to throughout as a Free Imperial City.

Similarly, the editors agreed upon the spelling of Peter Isselburg's name, which occurs with great variation, as that entered into the Nürnbergischer Künstlerlexikon.<sup>15</sup> Printer's and publisher's names have been given according to the norms of the CERL Thesaurus.<sup>16</sup>

The editors are deeply grateful for everyone who contributed to this volume and whose work and expertise brought the project to this happy conclusion.

Notes on Contributors

Tamar Cholcman

is chair of the department of Art History at Tel Aviv University and co-editor-in-chief of the journal Emblematica: Essays in Word and Image. Her research focuses on the ephemeral art of festivals during the 16th and 17th centuries, in general, and on festival emblems, in particular. Her current project concerns the use of emblematics by artists in Northern Renaissance and Baroque Art in order to explore and distinguish their role and place within the Republic of Letters. She is the author of Art on Paper: The Triumphal Entry of the Archdukes Albert and Isabella into Antwerp, 1599 (Brepols: 2014) and of Festival Emblems: A Paradox along the Triumphal Route, forthcoming in the Imago Figurata Studies series (Brepols). Her articles have appeared in the following venues, among others, Word and Image, Viator—Medieval and Renaissance Studies, Source: Notes in the History of Arts, Emblematica: Essays in Word and Image, and Explorations in Renaissance Culture. She is recipient of research grants from, among others, the Herzog August Bibliothek Wolfenbüttel (2016) and the Israeli Science Foundation for research in the Humanities (2015–2019; 2021–2024). She serves as a member of the Advisory Board of the Society for Emblem Studies; the Discipline Representative (emblem studies) at the Renaissance Society of America (2020–2022); and book review editor of Emblematica: Essays in Word and Image (2018–2022).

Timothy W. Cole

is Elaine and Allen Avner Professor Emeritus, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. As a member of the University Library faculty for 31 years and affiliate faculty in the School of Information Science (iSchool) for 20 of those 31 years, Professor Cole has published, taught, and presented widely on digital library system interoperability, the use of Linked Open Data in library applications, metadata applications, web-based annotation service architectures, and document mark-up languages. In his tenure at Illinois he has held appointments as Assistant Engineering Librarian for Information Services, Systems Librarian for Digital Projects, Mathematics Librarian, Interim Head of Library Digital Services and Development, and Coordinator for Library Applications in the iSchool's Center for Informatics Research in Science and Scholarship. He has co-authored three textbooks: Using the Open Archives Initiative Protocol for Metadata Harvesting (Westport, CT: Libraries Unlimited, 2007); XML for Catalogers and Metadata Librarians (Westport, CT: Libraries Unlimited, 2013), Coding with XML for Efficiencies in Cataloging and Metadata: Practical Applications of XSD, XSLT, and XQuery (Chicago, IL: ALA Editions: 2018). He has served as principal investigator (PI) or co-PI for grants funded by the Institute of Museum and Library Services, the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Science Foundation, and the US Army. In 2017 he received the Frederick G. Kilgour Award for Research in Library and Information Technology, awarded annually by the Online Computer Library Center, Inc., and the Library and Information Technology Association, a division of the American Library Association.

Christopher D. Fletcher

is the Assistant Director of the Center for Renaissance Studies at the Newberry Library in Chicago, IL. He earned his Ph.D. in Medieval History from the University of Chicago in 2015. His research and teaching focus primarily on religion and public engagement before 1800. He has written articles and book chapters and co-edited volumes on various forms of public outreach in medieval and early modern Europe and the digital humanities. He often shares the Newberry's pre-1800 collections (including emblems!) with the public through in-person collection presentations, exhibitions, social media, and digital resources.

Silvia Glaser

is the head of the industrial arts and design collections (Leiterin der Sammlung Gewerbemuseum und Design) at the Germanisches Nationalmuseum in Nürnberg. She earned her Ph.D. in Art History from the Friedrich-Alexander-Universität in Erlangen with a work on the early years of porcelain production in Ansbach. She began her current position in 1990, after a two-year curatorial fellowship at the Germanisches Nationalmuseum. Between 1990 and 2003, she taught courses in art history at the Universität Erlangen, the Akademie der Bildenden Künste in Nürnberg, and at the Universität Bern (Switzerland) on the subject of "Art and Vocation." Since 1987, she has authored numerous publications on the applied arts (goldsmithing, tin-glazed earthenware, porcelain, glass) in the early modern period, with a particular emphasis on ceramics. She has also curated four major exhibitions on the applied and industrial arts at the Germanisches Nationalmuseum: Finnisches Glas der Gegenwart (1992), Die italienischen Fayencen im Germanischen Nationalmuseum (2000), Nürnberger Fayencen im Germanischen Nationalmuseum (2017), and 150 Jahre Bayerisches Gewerbemuseum Nürnberg (2019). Since 1998, she has also been a jury member for the annual competition "Design im Handwerk," held by the Handwerkskammer Mittelfranken.

Victoria Gutsche

is a research fellow at Friedrich-Alexander-University Erlangen-Nürnberg. Her research centers on early modern literature, editorial studies, literature of the 19th and 20th century, German-Jewish literature, and diversity in literature. In addition to book chapters and articles she has published Zwischen Abgrenzung und Annäherung. Konstruktionen des Jüdischen in der Literatur des 17. Jahrhunderts (2014) and Die Romantrilogie. Zur Geschichte einer großen Form von ihren Anfängen bis zur Mitte des 10. Jahrhunderts (2023); her edition of Julius Wilhelm Zinggreff's Deutsche Kleinschriften (with Werner Wilhelm Schnabel and Dirk Niefanger) is forthcoming.

Stephanie Leitch

Associate professor of Art History at Florida State University, Stephanie Leitch specializes in the history of early modern printmaking. Her book Mapping Ethnography in Early Modern Germany (2010) won the Roland Bainton Book Prize in Art History. Her forthcoming book, The Art of Observation in Early Modern Print Media: Training the Literate Eye (Cambridge University Press, 2024), explores how illustrations in the now little-known genres of cosmographies and physiognomies coached early modern readers to make visual decisions. This investigation into the image program of these published books is poised at the confluence of art history, book history, and investigations into knowledge-making genres active in the history of science. Her project about the role of copied images in early modern travel narratives is sponsored by a collaborative research fellowship from the ACLS.

Thomas Schauerte

Born in Aachen, Germany. 1987–1996 M.A. studies in History, English, Latin, Philosophy, Christian Archaeology and Art History (major), at universities in Bayreuth and Berlin, M.A.-diploma at Friedrich-Alexander-University Erlangen-Nürnberg on „Überlegungen zum druckgraphischen Werk Albrecht Altdorfers.“ From 1997 freelance at the Gräflich Pappenheim'sche Verwaltung, Pappenheim: historical studies of local and art history. 1997 Postgraduate student at Vienna university. December 1999 Dr. phil. at the Freie Universität Berlin: „Die Ehrenpforte für Kaiser Maximilian I.“ From 2000 freelance at the Germanisches Nationalmuseum Nürnberg for the catalogue of Dürer's graphic oeuvre. Since 2001 teaching commissions at the universities of Berlin, Heidelberg, Trier, Erlangen, and Regensburg. 2001 research grant at the Herzog August Bibliothek, Wolfenbüttel. 2001/03 exhibition curator „Albrecht Dürer: Das große Glück. Kunst im Zeichen des geistigen Aufbruchs,“ at the Kulturgeschichtliches Museum Osnabrück. 2005/06 exhibition curator „Der Kardinal.

Albrecht von Brandenburg, Renaissancefürst und Mäzen“, at the Museum Moritzburg, Halle/S. March/April 2007 Guest Curator at the Academy of Arts, Honolulu, Hawai'i. From 2009–2019 director of the Albrecht-Dürer-House, Stadtmuseum Fembo-Haus and curator of the art collections of the City of Nürnberg. Since 2019 director of the municipal museums of Aschaffenburg. 2023 habilitation on “Das totale Kunstwerk. Haus und Kirche des Egid Quirin Asam in München.”

W.W. Schnabel

After completing his military service, Werner Wilhelm Schnabel studied history, German studies, sociology, and political science at the universities of Erlangen-Nürnberg, Zürich, and Vienna. He completed his studies by passing the state examination for teaching in higher education and received his Ph.D. in 1990 in the subject of Bavarian and Franconian history with a dissertation on “Österreichische Exulanten in oberdeutschen Reichsstädten” [Austrian Religious Refugees in Southern German Imperial Cities]. He spent years as a researcher on the editing project “Wissenschaftliche Erstausgabe der Schriften Julius Wilhelm Zinggreß” [Scholarly First Editions of the Writings of Julius Wilhelm Zinggreß], a third-party funded independent research project to catalog early modern manuscripts, and in 2000 he earned his postdoctoral qualification (Habilitation) with his research on the early history of friendship books (Stammbücher or alba amicorum). He completed another third-party funded independent project concerning literature of the nonacademic milieu in the seventeenth century. Since 2007 he has been a professor of modern German literature and a researcher at the University of Erlangen-Nürnberg. Schnabel is the editor of the online database “Repertorium Alborum Amicorum,” started in 1998, and researches the overlapping areas of literature and the history of art, culture, and society. He is particularly interested in Franconia and the contextualization of personal histories.

Andrew Schwenk

is a Ph.D. candidate in the department of Germanic Languages & Literatures at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Studying under Professor Mara Wade, he is specializing in early modern German literature with a graduate concentration in Medieval Studies. He has additional expertise in digital humanities. His dissertation research focuses on imaginative travel and its relationship to contemporary social change in fifteenth- and sixteenth-century German literature. He was a member of the research team transcribing the Röttenbeck volume and has presented this research at the Newberry Library, Chicago; he has also presented his research at the Sixteenth Century Studies Conference and the Renaissance Society of America. He previously worked as a freelance translator, providing English subtitles for episodes of shows such as Tatort and Wilsberg.

Jeffrey Chipps Smith

Professor Emeritus and Kay Fortson Chair in European Art at the University of Texas, Austin, specializes in Northern European art 1400–1700, especially that of Germany and the Netherlands. Smith's publications focus on Nuremberg and its culture, Albrecht Dürer, German sculpture, goldsmith work, Jesuits, Northern Renaissance art, patronage, and issues of historiography and reception, among other topics. His latest books are Albrecht Dürer and the Embodiment of Genius: Decorating Museums in the Nineteenth Century (Penn State Press, 2020), Kunstkammer: Early Modern Art and Curiosity Cabinets in the Holy Roman Empire (London: Reaktion Books, 2022), and Albrecht Dürer's Afterlife (London: Lund Humphries, May 2024). He was articles editor of Renaissance Quarterly and inaugural co-editor of the Journal of the Historians of Netherlandish Art. Smith served on the board of directors of the College Art Association, Renaissance Society of America, Frühe Neuzeit Interdisziplinär, Historians of Netherlandish Art, and Sixteenth Century Society and Conference. In 2018, he was feted with a Festschrift entitled Imagery and Ingenuity in Early Modern Europe: Essays in Honor of Jeffrey Chipps Smith (Brepols).

Mara R. Wade

is Professor Emerita of Germanic Languages & Literatures at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and is the immediate past president of the Renaissance Society of America.

Her research focuses on emblems, court studies of Germany and Scandinavia, gender studies, and German literature and the arts in the early modern period. She is an associate editor of Emblematica: Essays in Word and Image and the PI for Emblematica Online. She has held fellowships as a Getty Scholar 2018–2019; Newberry Library long-term fellow 2016–2017; as a fellow at the Swedish Collegium for Advanced Study, Uppsala, Sweden 2023; and she holds a senior research prize from the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation, a lifetime achievement award in recognition of her work in fostering German-American research networks. She was also awarded the prize for excellence in undergraduate teaching from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, University of Illinois.

An edited volume, Collections and Books, Images and Texts: Early Modern German Cultures of the Book was published as volume 49 of Chloe 2023.

received her Ph.D. in Classical Philology from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign in 2019. She completed her dissertation on the epigrammatic corpus of the Roman poet Martial, focusing on the text as a body and the body as a text. She has also written on the daring of Icarus and Daedalus flying away from Crete as a representation of the artist, proxemics in Herodotus, myth and spectacle in modern film, and zombie movies as katabatic journeys. She teaches ancient Greek, Latin, and humanities at Tempe Preparatory Academy in Tempe, AZ.
